My best friend growing up, I was called Jon back then. If anyone has any information on what happened that would help me a lot. I know his parents passed away when he was young and after that it was really difficult for him. Adam was totally unique, filled with so much power, made my childhood in Utah unforgettable, and I just hope he is at peace with his parents now. The whole family was like a second family to me and I will miss them all dearly <3

“ I met Adam shortly after his parents passed. I tried to help him over the years. I'm just now learning of his passing. Stay up my man. You be with your family now.

“ Adam was deeply loved by his parents Mont and Sallie. They are all together now and Adam is at peace.

I am Adam's ex, Allie. He and I were together for a good year and a half, maybe six years ago. Although I cannot say I am shocked, I am incredibly sad to hear of his passing. Like Adam, both my parents passed on when I was young. (Although, poor Adam lost his much closer together.) I actually, just yesterday, lost my baby sister as well. Someone reached out to offer condolences about my sister and in speaking with them, I was informed of Adam's passing. Just like my sister is with our parents, Adam is now with his. Adam held onto a lot of pain, anguish and unprocessed emotions, and as sad as I am to hear of his passing, I'm comforted he will no longer feel that. Wish I had been able to attend his funeral. Can I ask if his lifestyle lead to his death? I am trying to phrase it respectfully and vaguely as possible, so I hope you understand what I'm asking.

Yes, his lifestyle lead to his passing. I watched him fall after his friend Scottie passed away in Par City from an overdose. I'm not sure exactly how he passed, but the Adam I saw was about 150 pounds. Very skinny. I didn't recognize him until he called out my name. I will stay anonymous.
